

From Dreams to Reality through COLLABORATION

When: Sunday, June 20th

Time: 2:00 pm - 5:00 pm

Where: On Zoom

Price: Free of charge

Presentations will be followed by an opinion and idea exchange session!

Barbara Hoskins Sakamoto: Adventures in Global Collaboration

Co-author of the longtime best-selling Let's Go textbook series and co-creator of the International Teacher Development Institute, an online platform for English educators, Barbara will discuss how collaborative methods have changed since the pre-internet era. In addition to sharing her own stories, she will elaborate on some of the essential factors for creating and sustaining a long-term collaborative team.

Mari Nakamura: Promoting Young Learners' Core Skills through Intercultural Collaboration

Teacher of learners from primary to tertiary level and facilitator of the professional development community MELEP (Mari's English Language Education Port), Mari will share her two most recent projects for students of different age groups. Participants will see how developmentally appropriate intercultural exchange projects can help young learners attain core skills such as critical thinking, problem solving, creativity, and digital literacy.

JALT membership is not necessary to attend this exciting event. We welcome any and all teachers of younger learners. Click here to request a link to the Zoom meeting:
